Reinforcing Food Systems to Meet Urban Demand

March 27-28, 2017 • Royal Orchid Sheraton Hotel • Bangkok

Two days of cutting-edge best practice learning with information on innovative tools and technologies that are helping rural value chains meet urban demand. Cracking the Nut brings together agribusinesses, financial institutions, investors, donors, governments and development practitioners to discuss how best to co-invest in sustainable agriculture.

THREE FULL TRACKS

The conference will showcase competitively selected best practices through three tracks:

- ◇ Scaling technology and innovation for agriculture
- ◇ Improving sustainability and food security in urban markets
- ◇ Facilitating links from rural to urban parts of a supply chain

Our three-track event means you have a choice to pick the sessions that that work best for you.

THE MOST UP-TO-DATE CONTENT

Working with leading organizations like USAID, RTI International, Catholic Relief Services (CRS), IRG, and Chemonics, the conference will highlight new approaches and technologies for establishing sustainable rural value chains and urban food security.

Through interactive panels and breakout sessions, participants can actively contribute to discussions, such as alternative food sources, transport, climate-smart agriculture and the roles of the public and private sectors in balancing rural economic growth with rapidly-expanding urban markets.

GREAT OPPORTUNITIES FOR NETWORKING

Convening over 300 professionals representing development organizations, governments, donors, banks, investors, and private sector companies, Cracking the Nut is a great opportunity for participants to forge new professional contacts.

RELIVE THE CONFERENCE

All conference materials, including presentations and handouts, will be made available to all attendees following the event.
